Professor Treudley Paraphrases Latin Inscription for Memorial Gateway

THOSE inspiring words on the Alumni Gateway. I wonder who wrote them? Where did they come from? Have such thoughts ever passed through your mind as you entered the Ohio University campus through the stately portal at the northwest corner of the "College Green"?

SO ENTER THAT DAILY THOU MAYEST
GROW IN KNOWLEDGE WISDOM
AND LOVE

SO DEPART THAT DAILY THOU MAYEST
BETTER SERVE THY COUNTRY THY
FELLOWMEN AND THY GOD

Thousands of students have paused to read the inscriptions on the front and rear of the archway while many, doubtless, have asked these questions. The answers will be found in ensuing paragraphs.

Two striking and unusual events featured the program of the Centennial Commencement in 1915. One was the Historic and Ethnic Pageant, staged after weeks of preparation, in celebration of the one hundredth anniversary of the first college graduation exercises held in the Northwest Territory. The other was the unveiling and presentation of the Alumni Gateway. Both the pageant and gateway dedication ceremonies were attended by large crowds.

Funds for the gateway were secured from alumni by Dr. Clement L. Martzolf, '07, professor of History and Alumni Secretary at that time.

The dedicatory program was elaborate. Following a number by the Men's Glee Club, the invocation was offered by Rev. Dr. A. J. Hawk, '79, of Granville, now vice-president of the Ohio University Alumni Association. An eloquent tribute to his Alma Mater and to her distinguished children, and an expression of appreciation to those who made the gateway possible, were given by Doctor Martzolf.

The principal address of the occasion was made by William C. Ewing, of New York City, a grandson of Thomas Ewing, Ohio University's first graduate. The dedicatory poem was written, and read, by Mrs. Arwilla McLane Pugh, '00. Presentation of the gateway on behalf of the alumni was made by Bishop David H. Moore, '61. The memorial was unveiled by Miss Clara Blume, '23, now Mrs. Kerwood Martin, of Columbus, assisted by Miss Janice Battin, '26, and Miss Anna May Fenzel, '29x. The two latter are now, respectively, Mrs. Ned Bixler, Zanesville, and Mrs. Clay Milar, Athens. On behalf of the University, President Alston Ellis accepted the gateway and presented it to Governor Willis who accepted for the state.

And now, as to the origin of the gateway inscriptions. Recent inquiries upon the subject by the Alumni Secretary were rewarded by the suggestion that Frederick Treudley, emeritus professor of Philosophy and present resident of Washington, D. C., "might" shed some light upon the matter. Uncertainty was turned to certainty when, in reply to a communication from the Alumni Office, Ohio's beloved philosopher wrote, in part, as follows:

"One day as I was reading the life or autobiography of Andrew D. White, president of Cornell University, I came upon a statement that in his travels he observed this inscription in Latin on the walls or gateway of the University of Verona, Italy, I think. Perhaps Padua—but I think Verona. And it was this which suggested to him, as I recall, the idea of inscribing the words in English on the gateway of the Cornell campus. I am sure you can verify the facts as I have given them in the book to be found in the college library.

"Meeting Professor Martzolf who had the business in hand, I suggested it to him as being very appropriate

Seven Members of Ohio University Faculty Total 246 Years of Teaching Service

Veterans of Classroom Enjoy Work, Looking Forward to Retirement Day With Mingled Emotions and Host of Pleasant Memories

MEMBERSHIP in the mythical "Thirty-Year Club" at Ohio University is most exclusive while the requirements for admission are unvarying and are never waived. Once membership has been gained, however, dismissal is impossible. There are no dues.

To be eligible for membership in the group one must have served thirty years on the Ohio faculty. Seven professors are now members of this unusual organization. Each claimant of the honor has distinguished himself in national as well as local circles. Five of the men are listed in "Who's Who," while all are associated with numerous national organizations in their respective fields. Three are members of Phi Beta Kappa, two are Masons, and four are members of Greek-letter social fraternities.

Two of this group of notables, Prof. A. A. Atkinson and Prof. C. M. Copeland, are rapidly approaching their fortieth year of active work on the faculty. They have watched the oldest university in the Northwest Territory grow from an institution with 180 students, 15 instructors, and four small buildings, to one attracting 2625 resident students and an annual total enrollment of 6,000 students,* maintaining a faculty of more than 200 members, and one whose physical plant includes 23 buildings.

Down through this period of years these two men have enjoyed the thrill that comes with instructing college students. They have continued to mingle with the undergraduates in all of their interests and activities. They have watched and kept pace with the growth of Ohio University and with the ever-expanding knowledge of their fields. In short, they have stayed young though they have been on the campus almost a third of the institution's century and a quarter of existence.

DEAN E. W. CHUBB

Since the beginning of the present century a large majority of the students attending Ohio University have taken work under one or more members of the Club. Each professor has given personal instruction to several thousand persons, while the total number to have enrolled in departments under their supervision would be several times that figure.

Professor Atkinson, senior professor and head of the department of Electrical Engineering, is an Ohio graduate of the Class of 1891 and has been on the faculty since the spring of 1893. He says that forty years of instructing have made school life such a part of him that he dreads the day of retirement. He has in his possession a post-card mailed in 1890 by Dr. C. W. Super, now residing in Athens, president of the university at that time, saying that fifteen instructors had been secured, and that tuition that fall would be $9 a term. Only two members of the board of trustees back in those days are still alive, as are two members of that faculty, now retired.

Next in seniority, Prof. C. M. Copeland, director of the School of Commerce, joined the faculty in the fall of 1893. Although Mr. Copeland did not graduate until 1896, he became an instructor in Commerce in 1895 and principal of the department the following year. He says, "I would not, if I could, trade my years of instructing at Ohio University for any other field of work that I know."

All but two of the seven educators are graduates of the university in which they teach and have all reached high-ranking positions in their departments. Despite the time required for administrative duties, these men have retained a major part of their classroom work. They say that, somehow, they just can't give it up.

In addition to those already mentioned, the Club is composed of Dr. Edwin Watts Chubb, dean of the College of Liberal Arts and senior dean of the University; Dr. Hiram Roy Wilson, head of the English department of the College of Education, who joined the faculty in 1895; Dr. William B. Bentley, head of the Chemistry department; Prof. George E. McLaughlin, head of the department of Industrial Education; and Dr. W. F. Copeland, professor of Agriculture.

Dean Chubb, when asked to name the greatest progress that Ohio University has made in his time, replied, "The crowning achievement during the past two or three decades, in my opinion, has been the growth of the university in the esteem of the general public and of those who are experts at estimating the standards of college education."

Joining the faculty in 1900 as professor of English, Doctor Chubb began a period of service to Ohio University which has been commemorated in the Edwin Watts Chubb Library, erected in 1930. After seven years in his first position, Doctor Chubb was named to the deanship. In the year that he was appointed to his present office, the College of Liberal Arts boasted of but 38 graduates in comparison to the 200 in 1932.

Dr. Hiram Roy Wilson became a member of the faculty in 1896 and for 36 years has engaged in the teaching of English and English Literature. He was an assistant in the department of Chemistry during his senior year in the University. In 1897 he obtained his master's degree in Psychology, though part of his graduate work that year was done in Latin. He became an instructor in English at Ohio University in 1897 and was named professor in 1907.

Doctor Bentley came to Ohio in 1900 after years of wide and varied experience in his field of Chemistry. He holds three degrees from Harvard, obtaining his doctorate in 1898. He was an assistant in the Harvard chemistry laboratory from 1889 until 1891, when he became associate professor of Chemistry at the University of Arkansas. In the summer of 1892 he served as assistant in Chemistry at the United States Torpedo Station at Newport, R. I. From 1918 to 1919 he was an officer of the Ordnance Department of the United States Army, stationed at the Watertown, Mass. arsenal.

Prof. George E. McLaughlin was named an instructor in Electrical Engineering in the fall of 1901, although he had assisted in the department since the previous March. With extremely limited equipment, the department of Industrial Education was organized under his direction in 1913. Thirteen students started the course. His field of instruction now attracts 150 "majors" and occupies several thousand square feet of space on two floors of Super Hall. Heading the department in which he was a pioneer, Professor Atkinson is one of seven who pursued the first course given in electrical engineering at Ohio University. It was this class in the late eighties that provided the campus with its first electric illumination. The original switchboard, bearing the names of the initial class, a diminutive twenty-light Thompson-Houston dynamo, and a Shipman petroleum engine of two-horse capacity, was the principal equipment used. In student Atkinson's senior year a forty-light dynamo, a twelve horse-power boiler, and a vertical Racine engine were added. At that time this equipment was the last word in engineering machinery.

Two arc lights, costing $27 each, which were used in the old university chapel, produced the first display of electric lights in southeastern Ohio. In 1893 Professor Atkinson replaced Prof. William B. Stine who resigned to accept a position with the Armour Institute in Chicago.

PROF. A. A. ATKINSON

During the first year that Professor Atkinson served on the faculty students of his engineering class installed the first running water system at Ohio University. A news article of Jan. 21, 1893, in the Panorama, a pioneer campus publication, tells in an interesting manner of the pumping plant which supplemented Jupiter Pluvius in providing students with water.

The article read, "Increasing needs have rendered our present water supply inadequate for sanitary and laboratory purposes. The electric plant has been forced to shut down on several occasions from lack of water. As the rainwater from the roofs does not last through a considerable period of dry weather, and because of the many inconveniences, the Electrical Department has installed a pump at the Hocking River."

The pump had an amazing capacity of 300 gallons an hour and was run by an electric motor. The station was constantly observed by the students of the department. Underground wires connected the motor with the college plant. Before the time that Ohio University provided a caretaker for this work, it was a part of the duties of Professor McLaughlin, then an assistant in the electrical engineering department.

An editorial in a later issue of the Panorama, commenting upon these two marvels (the lights and the water system) of the mechanical world, said, "Come back ye alumni, and once again visit the classic halls of your alma mater, and see how she prospers as time passes."

Colleagues in several scientific societies, Doctor Bentley and Professor Atkinson are also authors of numerous books. Both are members of the American Association for Advancement of Science. Professor Atkinson and Dr. W. F. Copeland are associated in the Ohio Academy of Science. Doctor Bentley is affiliated with the American Chemistry Society, while Professor Atkinson is a member of the American Physics Society and of Phi Beta Kappa. The latter is also affiliated with Phi Delta Theta social fraternity, the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, and the Society for Promotion of Engineering Education. Among the best known of his writings is the book "Physics of Common Things."

THAT there will be some action taken in the next session of the Ohio state legislature, which meets January 2, affecting the financing of public education—both secondary and higher—is a foregone conclusion. The usual biennial provision will have to be made for the needs of the tax-supported colleges and universities, while some sort of funding of the deficit in the "state aid" account for weak school districts is imperative.

There are hundreds of teachers in the aid-receiving schools who not only have seen no pay checks this fall but who still are waiting for salary payments that are in arrears for the past year. There are Ohio University alumni known to the editor who have not received a cent for their services since last April and who, furthermore, stand but little chance of receiving anything whatever before next February.

If the universities are to be maintained as going concerns they naturally must be provided with at least the minimum requirements for operation. The administrators of these institutions of higher learning are paring their budget requests to the very bone in a conscientious effort to meet the demands of the time for economy plus efficiency even though they are aware that there is a point below which both economy and efficiency are sacrificed.

Confusion may arise in efforts to liquidate the debt to teachers in the aid-receiving districts and in the consideration of a new plan for state support of all elementary and secondary schools. In this confusion the urgent needs of the universities and colleges may be lost sight of and neglected by legislative solons. This must not be.

Every college-trained man and woman who appreciates the advantages that are being made available to citizens of the state should feel an urge and an obligation to further in every proper way the cause of tax-supported higher education. It is proper to defend the state's educational program in public and private discussions. It is proper to correct the misapprehensions of those who think the taxes that they, or their fathers, pay at the county court house go to finance the educational program. It is proper to express to one's representative or senator the hope that he will carefully and fairly consider the needs of the universities as well as the askings of the purely political units of the state government, giving to the universities neither more nor less than is justified by a sound and forward-looking policy of education. It is proper to work for the maintenance of such a program of education—from the kindergarten to the post-graduate school—as one would covet for himself or his sons and daughters.

In the frenzy for retrenchment which may come in the days ahead, when real values are difficult of discernment, let us trust, yea, labor to see, that sound judgment prevails in the consideration of every act affecting the cause of education in Ohio.

THE ordinary conception among people who do not live in college towns is that college students wear coonskin coats, have a delightful time and are blissfully unconscious of the burdens their parents are bearing to keep them in school. This may be partially true in some colleges where the students are all sons and daughters of wealthy parents but people in Southeastern Ohio where college students and college graduates are to be found in many homes, know different.

Students of the coonskin coat type do not represent the average American college. The average student works hard, is considerate of his parents and tens of thousands of them are sharing the burden of their education as far as their time will permit. During the present depression they are suffering hardships and taking the bitter with the sweet. Only the other day an official of a Michigan university reported that many students are wearing old clothing, living in cold and poorly furnished rooms and almost going without food that they may continue their studies. Some of them were found to be living on bread and milk with an occasional can of beans. It reminds one of the old days at the Ohio University when students brought their food and coal and wood from their homes to live in the Old East and West Wings at a minimum of expense.

These are the youngsters who set out to get an education and discovered that the depression had left them without funds. They aren't the kind that gives up without a struggle, and they aren't in college just to have a good time; so they plug along, ruining their health and showing a brave endurance that would do credit to fully-grown men and women, in the hope that they can somehow finish their studies and fit themselves for honorable places in the outside world.—The Athens Messenger, December 16, 1932.

SPORTS EDITOR, Ohio State Journal: "By a reliable source this department has been told that the University of Chicago is looking with appealing eyes toward Don Peden, Ohio University football coach, as the proper man to succeed Amos Alonzo Stagg next year as head gridiron instructor for the Maroons."

ASSOCIATED PRESS, Chicago: "Don Peden . . . joined the ranks of probable successors to Amos Alonzo Stagg . . . Officials at Chicago were mum on the report . . . up to Thomas W. Metcalf, Stagg's successor as athletic director, to name the new coach."

PRESIDENT BRYAN, Ohio University: "It will take a good offer to get Coach Peden to leave here but if Don gets a good offer from Chicago he will be foolish if he doesn't take it."

DON PEDEN (with that slow-breaking but engaging smile): "It's all news to me."

On and About the Campus . . .

"THE Great Thinkers of China" was the subject of an address by Dr. Homer H. Dubs of Marshall College at an open meeting of the Philosophy Club in Fine Arts Hall, December 9. The speaker has made an extensive study of Chinese thought in religion and philosophy. He has spent several years as a teacher in China.

THE annual season for elections to untold numbers of organizations has just broken upon the campus. With it has come an abundant blossoming of all varieties of pledge and membership pins. Honoraries, departmental clubs, and other organizations have made their choices known. Soon Torch and Cresset will select their new members.

Kappa Delta Pi, national honorary education society, has just admitted Harold Archer, Laurelville; Madge Campbell, LaRue; Mildred Giesecke, Athens; Marjorie Harrison, Palmerston, Pa.; Clyde Jones, Langsville; Edna Kennedy, Warren; Carl Parker, Athens; Delores Phelps, Athens; Janet Robertson, Youngstown; Esma Smith, Youngstown; Edna Stout, Winchester; Martha Thomas, Jerusalem; Dorothy Walker, Steubenville; William Wilson, Newark; and Sherman Gilmore, Athens. Phi Beta Kappa has initiated the six members whose names were given last month.

Six men were selected for Alpha Beta Chi, honorary commerce fraternity. These men were the highest ranking students of the School of Commerce. Six women were pledged to Sigma Alpha Iota, national women's music sorority. Hygeia Club, honorary health organization, initiated six new members, including Joe Sincic and Harry Lackey, well-known Bobcat athletes.

Studio Club has announced the names of two seniors and 20 juniors who were successful in meeting the requirements for membership. Varsity "O" awards have been made to several women as well as to the varsity gridgers. Numerals have been given women for participation in field hockey and to freshmen football players for withstanding the punishment of the varsity for a season.

Kappa Gamma, national honorary forensic league, has pledged eight members. John Groundwater, Cleveland, has been named to succeed Glen Broomall, Salem, as senior manager of basketball. The women's physical education society has just pledged three members — while all of the honored students have been asked to dig in their purses for dues, fees, and for the prices of keys and pins.

THE assistant in the Ohio University News Bureau this year is Charles A. Densmore, '32, of Locke, N. Y.

Mr. Densmore is a graduate of Ohio University's Department of Journalism and was editor-in-chief of The Green and White in his senior year. Under his leadership the official student publication continued the high standard of excellence which in late years has won for it high honors in state circles and which in 1931 brought a tie for first place in the semi-weekly division of the National College Press Association contest.

Contributions to The Ohio Alumnus in the form of campus and sports news are for the most part the work of Mr. Densmore.—Editor.

IF education is to advance, it must not only teach additional facts but an understanding of facts already learned. Sir Norman Angell, famed English economist, one-time member of Parliament, journalist, and lecturer told a large convocation audience, Nov. 30, in Alumni Memorial Auditorium.

The Englishman's spicy comment chiefly concerned education of the masses as related to money standards, armaments, and tariffs. Another enjoyable number of the series provided for Ohio University students was given December 7, when the Temple Male Quartet, of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., presented a musical program in convocation.

MANY distinguished scientists will appear on the Ohio University campus next spring when the 1933 convention of the Ohio Academy of Science will be held here early in April. The West Virginia Academy of Science has been invited to attend the meeting because of the proximity of Athens to West Virginia. Dr. James P. Porter, head of the Psychology Department, invited the group. The Academy has several members on the Ohio faculty.

Doctor Porter will represent Ohio University at the annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science late in December at Atlantic City. He will present an illustrated lecture, "A Comparative Study of Some Measures of Persistence."

DR. C. E. COOPER, head of the department of Geology and Geography, will leave Christmas night to attend the meeting of the National Council of Geography Teachers in Washington, D. C. This group, of which the Ohio professor is treasurer, has a membership of approximately 3,000. Doctor Cooper will read a paper December 27, at the Shoreham Hotel, on "Selling Geography."

OHIO'S undergraduates improved their scholastic rating at the mid-semester mark, according to the report of delinquent men and women released by the Registrar's Office. The total hours of delinquency was reduced seven per cent over the total for the same period last year.

The men's average showed a greater improvement than did the women's average. The former decreased from 42 to 37 per cent, while the women showed but a two-point lowering, from 26 to 24 per cent. Only 788 students received warnings, and 457, or 60 per cent of that number, were delinquent in but one course.

Real Relief Work To Be Done By "Y.W." Girls This Season

Christmas Party, Toys and Candy Give Way to Food and Clothing for Needy Youngsters

FOR fifteen years Ohio University women have carried on an extensive Christmas relief program, but this year new work must be done, a different "Merry Christmas" is to be provided families and children in the destitute Hocking Valley mining communities.

The University Y. W. C. A. is not seeking donations of toys this season. Neither will any of this organization's funds be spent in purchasing valueless gadgets for poor children. Good, warm clothing will be the Yuletide gift of Ohio University's women. Stockings, heavy underwear and fleecy pajamas will produce more of an appreciation of true Christmas giving among the kiddies than toys, since they have possessed neither for months.

"It is irony to present a toy to a child that has been kept away from the Sunday School classes our girls conduct and from his public school because of a lack of proper clothing," Dean of Women Irma E. Voigt remarked in telling of the Y. W. C. A. program this season.

Believing that food and raiment provide a foundation for spiritual giving, members of the University organization not only expect to relieve a huge amount of suffering in mining towns but also to enhance their work in Sunday schools, story hour meetings, sewing classes and the numerous other activities carried on by this group of co-eds.

Nor is the Christmas relief program the sole benevolent activity of the Y. W. C. A. For ten months each year teams of two girls each visit the mining towns each Saturday and Sunday teaching hand work, telling stories to children and conducting Sunday School services. Back in the days of the World War, before other agencies came to their aid, Ohio University women were active in twelve communities. Efforts this year have been concentrated in three centers, Hocking, Sand Ridge, and Circle Hill. In the first village, meetings are held at the home of a family which probably will be forced to move soon because the rent on their shabby little cabin has not been paid for months.

The organization is hoping to secure the back room of an old, abandoned store in case it becomes necessary to give up its present quarters. In this community, forty to fifty children and almost as many mothers are participating in the Y. W. C. A. activities.

Although the University unit has a membership of 275 undergraduates and 85 honorary members among the faculty and townspeople, cooperation in its Christmas relief program is campus-wide. Fraternities, sororities, and numerous other organizations offer their services and donations.

"The spirit of helping unfortunates, fostered by the Y. W. C. A., spreads until we find families and children, who might not be reached otherwise, being provided for by a group of boys, a dormitory of girls, or some student organization," reports the women's dean.

"Nothing is as demoralizing as poverty," Dean Voigt says. "That is our reason for discontinuing the large Christmas parties and gifts of toys, and the substitution of more practical gifts. We have adopted the brother and sister plan for 176 children. One hundred of these are found in mining towns, while 76 are at the Athens County Children's Home. In addition to bringing some Christmas cheer to these children, we hope to raise their plane, morally, physically and intellectually."

Not all of the work of the organization is confined to the Athens area. Freshman co-eds have made and sent 100 pairs of stockings to Algiers, North Africa, where they will be distributed by an Ohio University graduate who is teaching in a school there. Donations of 150 gifts were sent to the Caney Creek mountain school in Kentucky where another Ohio alumna will supervise their distribution.

According to the institution's officials, the Ohio University women have been for several years the only group contributing dolls to the Children's Charity Hospital, in Columbus.

Miss Mabel Wilson, Cincinnati, is chairman of the committee in charge of the Sunday services in the mining communities. Miss Florence Smith, Squantum, Mass., a junior, is supervisor of the Saturday and club work.

The social service program of the Y. W. is in part supported by funds received each Christmas Season from the operation of a "Triangle Gift Shop." A room in West Wing is attractively decorated and a wide variety of gifts displayed. Faculty women and students are generous in their patronage.

GROUP OF "Y. W." SUNDAY SCHOOL CHILDREN

Holiday Celebrations Planned In Cleveland and Youngstown

A section of the Bamboo Gardens, located at East 100th Street and Euclid Avenue, Cleveland, has been reserved by Ohio University alumni for a party to be held following the Ohio University-Western Reserve basketball game on the night of Wednesday, Dec. 28.

HAZELTIME, '32

There will be a brief meeting of the alumni chapter for the purpose of electing officers after which dancing will be in order until 2:30 a. m. Basketball Coach B. T. Grover will be guest of honor at the affair.

Advance reservations for the dance are not necessary. By telling the headwaiter that one is from Ohio University, a visitor will have free parking and checking privileges. Special rates for food will also be accorded members of the party.

For further information alumni in the Greater Cleveland area—and any others interested—should call members of the committee on arrangements who are: Homer Pritchard, '29, Nela Park; Carr Liggett, '16, Lansmere Road, Shaker Heights; or Eleanor Hazeltine, '32, Sweetbrier 6846-W.

"Ohio University Night"

A formal dance for Ohio University alumni and students will be held at Stambaugh Auditorium, Youngstown, on Thursday night, Dec. 29. Bill Cowden's orchestra, prominent in Youngstown, will furnish the music, and a floor show will be staged by the Cady Sisters, well-known night club and radio stars.

Only a limited number of tickets will be sold, according to the committee, and all persons interested are asked to call or write Margaret McDermott, 323 S. Garland Ave., Youngstown. Reservations are required. Tickets sell for $1.50.

Michael Graban, is head of the committee which includes, besides himself, Miss McDermott, George Seedhouse, Flora Lax, and Dorothy Butler. A committee of three undergraduates has been co-operating on the campus to bring the party to the attention of Youngstown students. The undergrads: Catherine Sweeney, Harry Lackey, and Anjulie Fitzsimmons.

Death of Railroad Attorney Terminates Brilliant Career

Clyde Brown, '95, general solicitor of the New York Central Lines, died at his home in Westport, Conn., Nov. 30, 1932. He had been ill three months.

Mr. Brown was born in McConnelville, Ohio, fifty-nine years ago. He came to Ohio University and graduated in 1895 with a Ph. B. degree. Upon the completion of his work he was made an instructor in Philosophy and Psychology. Two years later he advanced to the rank of associate professor and in 1898 was made full professor of Philosophy and Pedagogy, serving in that capacity for two years.

On July 14, 1898, Mr. Brown married Miss Caroline Schwefel, '96, of Athens, by whom, in addition to a son and daughter, he is survived. A sister is Mrs. Arthur D. Davis (Minnie Brown, '01), of Columbus.

Mr. Brown became associated with the New York Central Railroad in 1907, as assistant to the vice-president in charge of legal work. He was made general solicitor of the railroad the following year and soon after rose to the general solicitorship of the entire New York Central system.

With lawyers and officials of the New York Central and other roads he labored for twelve years toward the unification agreement reached in October, this year, by the heads of the Eastern railroads in which they accepted the Interstate Commerce Commission's four-year consolidation plan as the basis for future unification moves. In 1931 he was chairman of the legal committee of the Eastern railroads when the nation's carriers asked a 15 percent freight rate increase, which was denied by the commission, although other valuable concessions were made.

The railroad attorney was a member of the Association of the Bar of

Youngstown Ohio University Women's Club Has Luncheon

Sixty-one Ohio University women enjoyed a delightful luncheon bridge at the Women's City Club in Youngstown, November 5, 1932.

Mrs. Herbert Hottell (Josephine Mackin, '26), head of the newly-organized Youngstown Ohio University Women's Club, presided at a short business meeting during which the constitution and by-laws were read by Jennie Polley, '23, chairman of the committee on Constitution.

Other officers and committee chairmen are: Secretary, Elizabeth Brubaker, '12; Membership, Blanche Long, '14; Program, Margaret McDermott, '30, 2-yr.; Publicity, Elizabeth Lowmiller, '20, 2-yr.; Historian, Mary Pallay, '33x; and Pianist, Mrs. Delmar Kerr (Marjory Cover, '29, 2-yr.) Members of the Advisory Board are Lucy Pittinger, '22, 2-yr., Ola Strong, '25; and Genevieve Mariner, '14, 2-yr.

At the conclusion of the business session cards were in order. High honors were won by Loretta Shook, '22, 2-yr., and Mrs. G. E. Roudebush (Mabel Haight, '16, 2-yr.).

Mrs. H. S. Floyd (Flavia Dunstan, '18) was chairman of the entertainment committee for the November meeting. Her associates were Edna Lowmiller, '25, and Mary Pallay. The next meeting will be held January 28, 1933, with Mrs. Roudebush as chairman of the committee on arrangements.

the City of New York and of the Union League Club. He had made his home in Westport for the past year. Previously he had resided at 277 Park Ave., New York City.

Special cars attached to a New York, New Haven & Hartford train to carry notables of the transportation world from New York City to Westport for the funeral. Among the honorary pallbearers were two railroad presidents, a former president, an executive vice-president, and other high officials of Eastern lines. Burial was made in Willowbrook Cemetery, Westport.

Of Mr. Brown, Dr. Hiram Roy Wilson, schoolmate and faculty colleague at Ohio University, said, "He was perhaps the most brilliantly intellectual man ever graduated from Ohio University."

Bobcat Gridders Share in All-Ohio Honors; Sadosky Mentioned on All-American Roster

By C. D. DENSMORE, '32

WITH basketball activities just getting under way and memories of football still lingering, it appears that the sports columns in the Alumnus this month are destined to be a Sports Pot-Pourri. To start off, let us take one more glance at the 1932 football campaign before the cage game steals the entire show.

Four outstanding Bobcat gridmen have been receiving All-This and That honors. Colvin, Snyder, Sadosky, and Collins were selected for All-Buckeye honors by the United Press and numerous Ohio papers, while the first three were picked on the Associated Press team. Colvin and Sadosky were chosen on virtually every All-Ohio team, while Sadosky was given honorable mention on an All-American selection.

Joe Colvin is a center and hails from Portsmouth. William Snyder, a tackle, comes from London (Ohio). Lenard Sadosky is a Euclid (Cleveland) product and plays at the fullback position. George Collins is an end and calls Sidney his home. George was an All-Ohio end last year. All but Snyder are seniors. Snyder has one more year to play.

Some interesting figures are revealed by statistic sheets of encounters this fall. Ohio gained 172 points against 29 for the opposition. Of this total, the Bobcats scored 67 markers in the Buckeye race, while the only non-conference foe to gain points against Ohio was Indiana. An average for the season gives Ohio 19 points per game with slightly more than three points for the opposition.

The Pedenmen crossed the goal line 26 times and 14 tries for extra points were successful. Four touchdowns, three successful kicks after touchdowns, and a safety explain the opposition's points. Miami is credited with two touchdowns, two placements, and a safety. The point which won the game for Indiana was the third placement.

In the number of first downs, the Bobcats far excelled the showing of their opponents. Ohio's eleven covered the 10-yard distance 112 times, while 52 were chalked up by the opponents. Against Franklin, Ohio ran up a total of 28 first downs, the most recorded in any one game. The tightest ground-gaining encounter was the game at Annapolis in which Navy shaded Ohio in downs, 9-6.

The Bobcats are credited with 2,027 yards gained by rushing, or an average of 225 yards per game. Ohio's opponents averaged 106 yards. Ohio Wesleyan with 202 and Miami with 200 yards gained heaviest among the opponents. Franklin gave the most ground before Ohio's rushes as 510 yards were gained in that encounter.

During the season, Ohio's passers tried 131 passes. They were successful in 80 attempts, failed to complete 42 of them, and had nine intercepted. The Bobcat foemen took to the air 109 times connected on 41 occasions, missed 47 throws, and had 21 intercepted. Ohio University gained 262 yards through the air, while the opponents were limited to 245 yards.

With two open dates remaining on the 1933 Bobcat schedule, the only new names to be found there are Purdue, runners-up in the Big Ten race, and Marshall, newcomer to the Buckeye conference. During the nine years that Don Peden has been guiding Ohio University football destinies the Bobcats have won 56 contests, lost 16, and tied four. His teams have gained a total of 1522 points to 333 for the opponents. During the past four seasons Ohio has won 31 games and lost but 3, meanwhile winning three Buckeye conference championships and one runner-up position.

The curtain was formally rung down on football activities on the night of December 1, when approximately 140 varsity and freshman gridgers, Ohio's coaching staff, sports writers, and administrative officers attended the tenth annual football banquet at the University Commons.

AS THE 1932 basketball season gets under way, Coach "Butch" Grover is faced with the serious problem of what to do with all of his high-grade sophomores. The Bobcat mentor has a dozen second-year men that are anxious to take the floor for Ohio but according to the rules he can't play more than five men at a time.

In winning easily from Bliss Business College of Columbus, 38-22, the Bobcats showed a large crowd of Ohio fans that they must be consulted when it comes to deciding the conference championship this winter. Grover used 12 players in the Bliss game, seven of them being sophomores.

Ohio's opponents, who handed the Grovermen an upset last year, got started quickly but could not hold the pace. After the first five minutes of play Bliss was out of the running. Bernard Berens, center, of Lancaster, towering six feet, five inches from the floor, was the outstanding player on the court. Playing his first intercollegiate encounter, Berens chalked up 22 points in 7 field goals and 8 free throws. He accounted for six charity points before he missed. As it might be said, Berens and Bliss tied.

Among the newcomers to Butch's varsity who will be heard from this season are Pearl Reichley, Roy George, Bill Fogelsong, and Pete Bernardo. Of course, there are other sophomores who will break into the lineup, but these players are worth special notice. Reichley, a fast forward from New Lexington, is one of the speediest players on the squad. Roy George, former Canton McKinley guard, is a steady player who works well with Saunders, veteran at the other guard post. Fogelsong, from Mason, W. Va., has height and a fairly good shooting eye. He has teamed well with Harold Brown at the forward position, though Reichley also works well there. Pete Bernardo, rangy tackle on the 1932 football team, is a good, defensive guard who can be used at center as well.

Ohio grabbed an early lead in its initial game when Berens scored the first point of the season on a free toss. Bliss came back to gain the only lead they enjoyed during the game when Davies made a long shot and Meier followed with a foul throw. Berens and Saunders ran the score to 7-3 and competition began to lessen rapidly.

Bliss drew to within five points just before the half ended, 19-16. In addition to the starters, who were Brown and Reichley, forwards; Berens, center; Saunders and Lackey, guards, the veterans Mills and Doll saw action. Besides the sophomores already mentioned, Siegel and Banko broke into the line-up. The former is a forward from Brooklyn, N. Y., while the latter jumps center, played end in football, and lives in Cleveland.

Two weaknesses were shown in the opener. Contrary to early opinions, the Ohio players were not deadly accurate in their attempts at the basket. Numerous slips in the passing attack lost the ball for the Bobcats on several occasions.

Much of the latter fault was caused by anxiousness to keep from violating the new, 10-second rule. Ohio men tried 70 shots but converted only 13 of them. The opponents tried for the basket 43 times and realized but eight.

SOLONS of the Buckeye Athletic Association announced spring baseball schedules following their meeting in Columbus, December 11. Previous to the session it had been dubious if all present members would be able to play the diamond sport because of the decline in athletic receipts. Miami, Marshall, and Cincinnati were the only schools to show increased attendance at football this fall.

The conference refused to announce football schedules for 1934, though final arrangements were made for the gridiron race next fall. Difficulty is being encountered in fixing the 1934 dates, it is reported. Marshall College of Huntington, W. Va., replaces Denison in the baseball schedule, although the Granvill school was given an opportunity at the meeting to reconsider its action.

The schedule for Coach Peden and his supporters of the national pastime is April 21, Miami at Athens; April 22, Ohio Wesleyan at Athens; April 29, Marshall at Huntington; May 4-5-6, tentative trip into Michigan planned; May 9, Marshall at Athens; May 12, Miami at Oxford; May 13, Cincinnati at Cincinnati; May 16, Ohio Wesleyan at Delaware, May 19, Cincinnati at Athens.

AFTER the Navy battle last fall, but alas, before the Miami game, an ardent follower of Bobcat football and an Ohio alumnus wired the Ohio University group at the Athens Messenger (Gordon Bush, '24, publisher; Charles Harris, '06, managing editor; and Bill Smiley, '27, city editor) that a complete 1933 gridiron schedule had been arranged.

The following message was signed by Ed. MacWilliams, now a famous vaudeville headliner and a former Phi Delt at Ohio University. It was Eddie that arranged for and financed the broadcasting of the Ohio-Ohio Wesleyan game in 1931 so that he could follow the team from his Chicago theatre.

Washington, Oct. 16, 1932.

The Messenger:

Met Peden at Carvel Hall (Annapolis) but didn't have opportunity to submit 1933 schedule to him. Please see to it that this schedule reaches his hands for confirmation. I am desirous of breaking its authorization in Virginia Beach Astonisher, world's most confidential newspaper. The schedule: Sept. 30, Ohio State; Oct. 7, Purdue; Oct. 14, Northwestern and Michigan, (double-header); Oct. 21, Southern California; Oct. 28, Tulane and Tennessee, (double-header); Nov. 4, Army; Nov. 11, Pittsburgh; Nov. 18, Rio Grande; Nov. 25, Yale, Harvard, and Notre Dame (triple-header). In order to give teams to be played on November 25, a fair chance, would suggest Bobcats be sent into battle handcuffed and blindfolded.

Yours for Equalization,
Eddie MacWilliams.

LACKEY AND BERENS

VARSITY Track Coach William Herbert and his proteges of the cinderpaths have a strenuous campaign ahead of them in the spring. The Bobcat thinyclads have three dual meets arranged in addition to the All-Buckeye meet at Delaware, May 26-27. Ohio Wesleyan will bring its track squad to the Ohio stadium April 15, and Cincinnati comes one week later. Ohio University has as its third opponent Marshall College on May 13, though the place has not been decided.

Herbert has been steadily building his track team from very little material in 1926, until now when he has quite a formidable group ready for spring activities. Several sophomores, including Elden Armbrust, who made himself known on the gridiron, will be added to the squad of veterans.

Seven Members of Faculty

(Continued from page 5). I claim the other Thirty-year men who are members of Phi Beta Kappa. Dean Chubb and Doctor Wilson have gained national recognition with their writings. Dean Chubb, who holds a doctor's degree from Lafayette College and has studied at the University of Berlin, is the author of English Words, Stories of Authors, Sketches of Great Painters, and Masters of English Literature.

Doctor Wilson is a member of Delta Tau Delta social fraternity and of Phi Mu Alpha, honorary music organization. He is affiliated with the Modern Language Association and the National Council of Teachers of English. He is author of A Teacher's Manual of English Grammar and Analysis, and editor of an edition of Silas Marner. He is also joint-author of Freshman Rhetoric, one of the outstanding college textbooks of English.

Dr. William F. Copeland, four years younger than his brother of the School of Commerce, became an assistant in Biology and Geology in 1902, his senior year. He held this position until 1907 when he received his doctor's degree at Clark University. He was named professor of Elementary Science in 1907 and in 1910 received the professorship which he now holds. In his undergraduate days he was a student of his brother in commercial subjects. Both are members of Beta Theta Pi social fraternity.

Twelve students enrolled for business training in 1893, and the first person to register for work was a woman. Prof. C. M. Copeland of the School of Commerce still possesses records and files of his students back to the time when a dozen bewildered undergraduates came into his room to begin commercial studies.

He also treasures the report books in which he has saved the standing and achievements of all of his students. Completing his collection of records, he has all of the catalogs and bulletins that have been published concerning work in his department, and later, the School. From its beginning in 1893, the Ohio University School of Commerce has developed into an organization with a staff of 12 instructors and an enrollment of more than 500 students. Of this total figure more than 325 are majoring in commercial studies.

One of the first two men to be awarded a degree in commercial studies after Professor Copeland founded the School of Commerce was his son, Dean B. Copeland, who is now an official of the Citizens' National Bank of South Bend, Ind. Another son, W. F. Copeland, named after his uncle on the Ohio faculty, also took courses under his father before transferring to New York University for further training. The latter is now an assistant vice-president of the First National Bank of Chicago.

An unusual and interesting sidelight on the teaching experiences of Professor Atkinson is that he has served as instructor for three members of the "Club" as well as for a score of other present faculty members who are graduates of Ohio University. Much of the supervision of laboratory work was retained by the senior professor until a few years ago. He did not abandon the teaching of Physics to freshmen until last year.

Three more of the university teaching staff will be eligible for membership in the Thirty-Year Club within a short time. Lewis J. Addicott joined the faculty as instructor in Civil Engineering in 1904 and is now head of his department. George C. Parks, treasurer of the University, was appointed instructor in Penmanship and Bookkeeping in 1905. He served as an instructor and assistant professor in the School of Commerce until 1923 when he became treasurer and business manager. Prof. J. R. Morton was named as instructor in Chemistry in 1905 upon his graduation from the University.

for the arch. This seemed to meet his approval and so that legend or motto was inscribed on the archway. I have always thought it a happy inscription and was pleased to have been in this small way associated with so good a man as Professor Martzoff, and to have suggested something which, if thought about by the young people who throng that archway and acted upon, would lead them upward and ever upward to the hills whence comes the true man's strength."

In accordance with Professor Treudley's suggestion, reference was made to the Autobiography of An- drew D. White and on page 442 these words were found:

"I erected at the entrance of the university grounds a gateway, on which I placed a paraphrase of a Latin inscription noted by me, many years before, over the main portal of the University of Padua, as follows:

"So enter that daily thou mayest become more learned and thoughtful;

So depart that daily thou mayest become more useful to thy country and to mankind."

The White paraphrase seeming a bit too long for use on the Ohio gateway, Professor Treudley re-stated it as given in italics above.

This is the answer to "Whence the inscription?"

A Tablet May Be Erected to Four Athens County Bishops

A suggestion that a tablet be erected in Athens to the memory of four bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church who were born in Athens County is meeting with approval in local Methodist circles, according to a person interested in seeing the suggestion bear fruit.

These prelates, three of whom graduated from or attended Ohio University, are: David H. Moore, '60; Earl Cranston, '61; Edward R. Ames, and Charles McCabe.

Bishop Ames came to Ohio University in 1826 but did not complete work for a degree, remaining only three years. He returned in 1852 to receive the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity. Bishop Cranston was honored by his alma mater when the degree of LL. D. was conferred upon him in 1896.

Bishop McCabe was born in the house on University Terrace now occupied by the University Hospital. It is altogether probable that he would have attended college in Athens had it not been for the influence of an uncle, Dr. Lorenzo Dow McCabe, '43, a graduate and one-time faculty member of Ohio University, who became a member of the teaching staff of Ohio Wesleyan University and was for five years acting president of the Methodist school. Bishop McCabe attended Ohio Wesleyan University.

None of these four bishops is now living. Bishop Cranston was the last to go, having died only this fall.

Here and There Among the Alumni

Martha L. Gamble, '28, is supervisor of kindergarten and the first six grades of the Allendale School for Boys, Rochester, N. Y. Last summer Miss Gamble attended the International Educational Fellowship Conference at Nice, France, and presented a scheme for educating children in the United States to understand the children of other nations.

Dr. Blanc R. Goldsberry, '14, University Physician and member of the Athens firm of medicos, Merwin & Goldsberry, is becoming famed as a rifle shot. Shooting in the National Postal Matches conducted last month by the National Rifle Association, Doctor Goldsberry took 14th place (first in Ohio) in the "Wimbledon" match with a score of 192 out of a possible 200 points at 200 yards. In the "Dewar" match he finished in sixth position, nationally, (again, first in Ohio), with 398 points out of a possible 400 at 50 and 100 yards.

Dr. Esther M. Greisheimer, '14, associate professor of Physiology, University of Minnesota, has published again. This time the J. B. Lippincott Co. is bringing out for her a textbook on Physiology and Anatomy. A niece of Miss Greisheimer, Ruth Hand, Chillicothe, is enrolled in Ohio University this year as a freshman.

William S. Bundy, '15, is located in Cincinnati as an examiner for the Auditor of the State of Ohio.

Mrs. Elizabeth Hartinger, '12, for many years an English instructor in Glenville High School, Cleveland, is enrolled for graduate work at Ohio State University.

A card this fall to the editor from his good friends and schoolmates, Dr. G. A. Woodworth, '20, and Mrs. Woodworth (Margaret Higbie, '21), of Niles, gave the unhappy information that Doctor Woodworth was in St. Mary's Hospital, Rochester, Minn., preparing to submit to an operation for an injury received in an elevator accident May 5, 1931. Doctor Woodworth was for several months a patient in the Cleveland Clinic. He is a physician and surgeon.

A promotion to a full professorship in History at Tufts College, Medford, Mass., came to Ruhl J. Bartlett, '20, last June.

Harvey B. Dallas, Jr., '31, is a law clerk in the head office of the Chase National Bank — one of the nation's largest — at 18 Pine St., New York City.

Miss Nellie Torrance, a junior at Ohio University, is a daughter of Mrs. Allie M. Torrance, '07, 2-yr., teacher and assistant principal of the Sherman School, Middletown.

Mrs. I. E. Morris (Freda Warren, '19), reports the death of her husband on Nov. 27, 1931. Mrs. Morris is principal of Richland High School, Allensville.

Roger E. Williams, '17x, until his resignation, Sept. 1, 1932, president and director of the D. A. Ebinger Sanitary Mfg. Co. (enameled ware, refrigerator cabinets, etc.), Columbus, has organized a real estate division of the BancOhio Corporation. Mr. Williams is a director in several Ohio corporations. He is a brother of Miss Gladys Williams, supervising critic of Kindergarten in the Ohio University Training School.

Another Ohioan, Grosvenor S. McKee, '16, has recently been associated, as vice-president and works manager, with the D. A. Ebinger Sanitary Mfg. Co. He is now, however, with the Baldwin-Southwark Corporation in Philadelphia. Mr. McKee was at one time assistant factory manager of the Timken Roller Bearing Co., Canton, later going to Chicago as production engineer and superintendent of the Grigsby-Grunow Company (Majestic radios and refrigerators).

Katherine Blazer, '31, a "Home Ec" major has accepted a position as dietitian in the Hatfield-Kessler Hospital, at Huntington, W. Va.

Alfred H. Rudich, '30, who entered the U. S. Army Flying School at Kelly Field, Texas, after graduating two years ago, is back in New York City. Last year he was associated with the T. L. Kamille Co., of Brooklyn, as a construction superintendent and estimator. He is now in business "on his own" as a tile contractor.

John Penzicks, '24, is foreman of the General Grinding Wheel Corporation in Philadelphia.

Mr. C. J. Bassler, '13, 2-yr., and Mrs. Bassler (Faye Elliott, '13, 2-yr.), are now residents of Gadsden, Ala., where the former is works accountant for the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company of Alabama. For many years he has been with the Goodyear company in Akron and abroad. Mr. Bassler has just recently gone to his new position of the auditorship of the Goodyear-Zeppelin Corp., of Akron.

Carlos M. Riecker, '22, Democrat, was the successful contestant for the office of Prosecuting Attorney in Morgan County. The loser in the election contest has been offered and has accepted a position on the staff of John W. Bricker, attorney general-elect of Ohio. Prosecutor Riecker was for several years an instructor in Libbey High School, Toledo. He studied law in the Y. M. C. A. school in Toledo and at the University of Cincinnati. His new office is in McConnellsville.

Prof. George E. McLaughlin, '14, head of the Industrial Arts department at Ohio University attended an early December meeting of the Manual Arts Association of the Mississippi Valley which met in Chicago. While in the Illinois city he also visited his daughter, Helen McLaughlin, '32, who is a graduate student at the University of Chicago.

At the December 1 meeting of the Ohio Manufacturer's Association officers and directors were chosen for the coming year. Among those in the latter group was Russell P. Herrold, '16, of Zanesville. Mr. Herrold is president of the Mosaic Tile Co., the largest company of its kind in the United States. He is also president of the Zanesville chapter of the Ohio University Alumni Association.

Gordon K. Bush, '24, editor and publisher of the Athens Messenger and a trustee of Ohio University was recently elected president of the Athens Chamber of Commerce, succeeding Robert C. Hess, '19x. T. M. Wolfe, '19, is the new vice-president. Among the directors are Howard C. Bobo, '19, and Harry C. Beckley, '10, 2-yr. Mr. Bush is also a newly-elected member of the Ohio Chamber of Commerce.

Dr. Ernest R. Wood, '16, assumed a position Sept. 13 on the faculty of New York University as associate professor of Educational Psychology. For the past three years he has been director of state scholarships for Ohio. Prior to that he was director of the Bureau of Measurements of the Kansas State Teachers College. Doctor Wood holds the A. M. degree from Clark University and the Ph. D. from the University of Chicago.

After a summer spent in California at the home of Mr. Krieger's parents, Earl C. Krieger, '20, and Mrs. Krieger (Harrriet Sprague, '21x), with their family, are now at home in Columbus where the former is engaged in the insurance business.

Mary Stalder, '29, who also received the M. A. degree at Ohio University in August, is studying in the Art Students League in New York City. In 1929-30 she was a student in the New York School of Fine and Applied Arts. The following year she was associated with the Miller Keltion Studios, Columbus, as an interior decorator.

Zata M. Smith, '30, is manager of the school cafeteria and instructor in Foods and Clothing in a Plainfield, N. J., high school. Miss Smith supervises the preparation of food for 800 students daily.

Dr. Theron H. Morgan, '25x, has hung out his shingle in Athens for the practice of medicine and surgery. Doctor Morgan attended Ohio University for three and one-half years, going from here to the George Washington University Medical School from which he graduated in 1929. He has spent the last three years at the Henry Ford Hospital in Detroit. He was resident surgeon there his last year. Doctor Morgan married Miss Mary Virginia Crow, '22.

GOLDSBERRY, '14

STALDER, '29

After four years as superintendent of the Harrisonville schools John W. Frank, '26, has accepted a similar position at Racine. He has just been re-appointed to the Meigs County Board of School Examiners.

Among the new names to be found in the current number of "Who's Who in America" is that of Dr. Charles E. Skinner, '14, of Madison, N. J. Doctor Skinner is professor of Education at New York University, the school from which he received his doctorate. He has previously taught in Indiana (Pa.) State Normal College and Miami University.

Paul E. Baird, '25, Gallipolis, is a second-year student in the Medical School of Tulane University, at New Orleans.

Among the many alumni who returned to their alma mater for work this summer was Blanche Tullis, '03, an instructor in Latin and Spanish in the Canon City (Colo.) High School. Miss Tullis is a sister of Rev. Dr. Don D. Tullis, '98, executive secretary of the Cleveland Council of Churches.

Mrs. Jennie Srigley (Jennie Sprague, '03), and sons, John H. Srigley, '29, and Robert Srigley, an Ohio University sophomore, returned to Athens this fall after a year's sojourn in California. During his stay in the West John Srigley took instructions in flying and in August received a private pilot's license. He is now enrolled in the University of Cincinnati Medical School.

Laura Briggs, '32, is an Art instructor in the Fairmont (W. Va.) State Teachers College.

Allan E. Bundy, '32, was successful in connecting with the Atlantic and Pacific Tea Co., and is located in Youngstown.

Robert P. Lowther, '21, of Tampa, Fla., is a special agent in the Prohibition department of the U. S. Department of Justice. His territory includes the Carolinas, Georgia, and Florida. At the time of passing through Athens last summer Mr. Lowther had just completed a three months' special assignment in Chicago.

Foster B. Cornwell, '32, has a preference for the law and in order to further his ambitions in that direction has entered the Law School at Ohio State University. Leavitt Gard, a classmate, is likewise a graduate student at "State." His line of specialization is Chemistry. Mr. Gard is a son of Dr. W. L. Gard, of the Ohio University faculty, and Mrs. Gard, Athens.

Dr. Josephus T. Ullom, '98, has recently been named cardiologist at the German-town, Philadelphia, Hospital.

Thomas A. Cotton, '94, 2-yr., Canisteo, N. Y., one-time Athens grocer and later owner of the Alpine Restaurant "on the way to the Post Office," has sent a son back to the campus this year. This second generation student is Thomas Stewart Cotton. Mrs. Cotton, who died in 1928, was Miss Mabel Stewart, '11, 2-yr.

James S. Berry, '32, and Mrs. Berry (Marcella Fisher, '32) are living in Philadelphia where Mr. Berry holds a position in the office of the Valvoline Oil Co. The Berrys were married in their senior years—October 23, 1931. They are at home at 101 Paramount Court, 2116 Venango St., Philadelphia.

Mrs. Robert W. Fling (Lois Cecil, '25), was in September called to Amesville, her parental home, from her present home in Colorado Springs, Colo., by the death of her father.

Dr. R. L. Morton, '13, professor of Mathematics, and Dr. A. B. Sias, professor of School Administration and director of Teacher Training, at Ohio University, and Kenneth Ray, '31, (M. A.) superintendent of schools at Coolville, Athens county, are members of the State School Finance Committee. Their appointments were made by William John Cooper, United States Commissioner of Education, upon recommendation of the Director of Education for Ohio. Supt. Ray is a member of the state legislature.

As the story is told . . . This fall Russell W. Finsterwald, '19, former Ohio University football player and coach, and a friend, Walter Miller, of Pomeroy, purchased a rabbit hound in partnership for $10. The dog was kept by Mr. Miller and was held in high regard by him.

Along came the rabbit season and Finsterwald welcomed the chance to see his dog in action. He and Miller trudged far afield. At the edge of a patch of weeds they scared up a rabbit which bounded away, crossing a wheat field and entering another patch of weeds. The hunters called their trusty hound and set him on the trail. Across the wheat field he galloped, baying with determination. At the edge of the field he lost the trail, circled, found the same trail he had just followed and came tearing back across the wheat field to the spot where his masters stood.

With a never-say-die spirit the panting hound circled again, picked up the trail, and scurried across the field. Once more he lost his hearing and backtracked. Finsterwald stood stock still gazing at the befuddled dog. As the hound circled and started on his fourth return trip across the wheat field, Finsterwald said:

"Walter, which end of that hound belongs to me?"

"Oh, I don't know," replied Miller.

"Why do you ask?"

"I want to know, because I'm going to shoot my half."

Miller thereupon agreed to buy Hunter Finsterwald's half interest in the rabbit hound.

Bertha Kulberg, '31, is an instructor in Physical Education in the high school at Montpelier, Vt. Her superintendent of schools is William A. Kincaid, '28.

Dorothy Dailey, '27, was soloist at the wedding, Oct. 2, 1932, of her sister, Christine, in Los Angeles, Calif. Mrs. Anson M. Reeder (Pauline Swanson, '29) was maid of honor. Miss Dorothy Dailey taught last year in the schools of Tarentum, Pa.

John W. Stewart, '16, is teaching in the Spencer, W. Va. high school and working on a Ph. D. degree at the University of West Virginia. He holds a Master's degree from Ohio State University.

Rev. Leslie O. Dabritz, '23, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, has accepted an invitation to a new pastorate in Santa Cruz, Calif., a beautiful coast city. He was previously located at Kerman in the Imperial Valley.

Time surely flies. On August 13, Harold E. Wise, '28, and Mrs. Wise (Julia Porter, '25x), of Columbus, celebrated their tenth wedding anniversary. Mr. Wise is football and basketball coach at West High School, Columbus. Assisting her four grandparents in the anniversary festivities was little Martha Jo, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wise.

Frances Morton, '30, daughter of Prof. J. R. Morton, '05, and Mrs. Morton, Athens, was a delegate this summer from the Fosterian Rune, Ohio University poetry club, to the convention of the American College Quill Club in Chicago. Miss Morton has had several of her poems accepted by national publications. She received an M. A. degree at her alma mater in 1931.

Another triumph in the career of J. Roy Gillen, '15, Wellston attorney, was registered in November when he was elected to the bench of the Jackson County Common Pleas Court. Mr. Gillen, who is totally blind, was a brilliant student at Ohio University and was in 1931 elected to membership in his alma mater's Phi Beta Kappa chapter. He is a veteran member of the state senate and has held assignments on important committees of that body. While in the university and the law school Judge Gillen employed a reader and by means of an exceptional faculty was able to acquire information through the auditory sense more rapidly than many students less handicapped than he.

The homes in Athens of F. D. Forsyth, '11, and J. Alonzo Palmer, '11, 2-yr., have been subjected recently to unauthorized and unceremonious visitations by persons whose intentions were not above question. In the Forsyth home the invader was surprised and caught in an upstairs room. At the Palmers' the uninvited guest had gotten no further than a basement room when he was put to route. Mr. Forsyth is cashier of the Bank of Athens while Mr. Palmer is assistant business manager of Ohio University.

Mrs. George E. Bush (Helen McDade, '29, 2-yr.), is located at Fort Benning, Ga., where her husband is a captain in the United States Army.

"Singin' in the Rain"

I FORGOT my galoshes, but I'm going along in the rain...having a good time...smoking my Chesterfields.

Just downright good cigarettes. They're milder and they taste better.
